In the bigger picture, I want North Park to continue to increase its diversity and also to do whatever it takes to fully integrate the campus student body. North Park had some diversity when I was a student, but there also was not nearly enough interaction and relationship-building among the different student populations (e.g., white/black, residential/non-residential, Christian/Jewish, etc.) and this was a lost opportunity that I still regret today. Because North Park is an intentionally Christian university, I want North Park to be a welcoming place for all, regardless of religion, ethnicity/race, socioeconomic class, gender, sexual orientation, disability status, political diversity, nationality, and as well as for every other dimension of diversity."
